

Venue Location

Regionally and nationally important insect habitat

This important wildlife haven is home to an astonishing variety of wildlife. Bat, Water Vole and orchid are amongst the attractions at Rammey Marsh. This site is also an extremely important site for a number of regionally and nationally important insects.

Sitting right next to the M25 this site is squeezed between industry and the town of Waltham Abbey. It's a favourite green space for the local community.

Adoption of this site will help with the land and habitat management preserving the area for both wildlife and the local community.
